Lesson are in Progress!

Initial consultations and weekly lesson are well underway, with many pupils demonstrating great improvements already! Although it was not what I had planned, I made the best of a tricky situation and moved into Suite 3, 113 Keppel St Bathurst on the 14th of April. After careful consideration, I just couldn't wait to get started any longer and I was fortunate enough to locate an office space at very short notice; thanks to Michelle from Elders!

I'd like to express a huge thankyou to all my clients who were so flexible with the change of venue at such short notice.

Renovations have Begun at 135A Howick Street Bathurst

All hands are on deck to renovate the shop and move in as soon as possible. The therapy room will be soundproof, have dim and/or brighten light options and consistent heating and cooling. There will be a waiting area with a receptionist to greet you and to make payments and bookings. While you are waiting, you can browse the educational, therapeutic and sensory resources available for purchase.

Sallywags Child Care Centre Visit

The children at Sallywags Child Care Centre have enjoyed reading my book so much that they invited me in for a reading of Baby Gnowch. They proudly showed me their fantastic Baby Gnowch artworks and creations. The children were fabulous listeners and insightfully answered questions about when their 'Baby Gnowch comes bursting out'.

Community Recognition Statement

My book, Baby Gnowch, and therapy business, Miss McFadden Educational Therapy, has received commendation in the NSW Parliament Hansard by the Hon. Paul Toole to acknowledge the positive contributions my wellbeing and literary services are bringing to the Bathurst community.

My Community Recognition Statement is proudly framed and on display in my office. I am truly proud. I look forward to extending my business so more members of my community can access educational therapy.
